$425 including some meals – Lodging not included

Cleveland & Columbus Collaborative Divorce practice groups have joined forces to present a regional 1.5 day advanced training in an inspiring setting to create high-level learning. Come network with colleagues from the region, and be prepared to challenge your thinking about what is possible for transformation in the Collaborative Process.

In order for Collaborative Divorce Professionals to help clients shift from positions to interests, we need to make a few shifts ourselves:

- come from a place of genuine curiosity;*
- help client's explore how their cares and concerns are being addressed;*
- letting go to guide them to their own informed decision*

This 2 day advanced Collaborative Divorce workshop will teach skills to help us engage curiosity and be more effective at exploring interests so that we can guide our clients to creative solutions that meet their unique needs

Jacinta's extensive background includes:
Current member of IACP Training Faculty
Current member of IACP Training Curriculum Committee
Former IACP Board member

“Jacinta's teaching on interests was an inspiration. She is warm and hilarious and (then you find) incredibly experienced, principled and wise. There is joyous de-bunking of some of that slightly self-righteous or regimented practice that it is so easy for us to acquire like calcium deposits as we do this work and instead, during her trainings, we get a clean sense of the professional we wanted to be when we started out.” London, UK 2015
